ANOTHER HEAD ROLLS BENEATH GOVERNOR'S AX

Department of Welfare Executive to Lose Job This Week

SPECULATION RIFE OVER DISMISSAL

Davey Orders Permanent Removal of Warden P. E. Thomas

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 25.—Another head fell today in Governor Davey's reorganization of Ohio's government.

Miss Mary Irene Atkinson, superintendent of the Ohio division of welfare, confided that she has been dismissed, effective March 1, by Mrs. Margaret Alliman, state welfare director.

Speculation blazed over the reason for the dismissal. Miss Atkinson said Mrs. Alliman notified her verbally her successor "would take over my office March 1."

Oberlin Woman Looms

Although neither Mrs. Alliman nor Governor Davey could be reached for comment, the Cincinnati Enquirer said Mrs. Luella Peabody Magruder of Oberlin "probably" will succeed Miss Atkinson. The Enquirer said Miss Atkinson was replaced because "she insisted upon qualifications for relief workers" that "would exclude all except professional welfare workers with college degrees."

Miss Atkinson, a cousin of H. S. Atkinson, former chairman of the board of trustees of Ohio State university, at first refused either to admit or deny reports of her dismissal.

"I have promised Mrs. Alliman that I will not make any statement," she said.

Later she issued a statement in which she emphasized "I was not asked to resign," but said:

"The superintendent of the division of charities serves at the pleasure of the director of welfare x x x last Thursday Mrs. Alliman notified me verbally that my successor would take over my office March 1."

Mrs. Alliman, arriving here shortly before midnight from her home in Canton, instructed hotel employees she was not to be disturbed.

Fifth to Fall

Miss Atkinson, a Democrat directing the activities of 61 employees, will be the fifth high welfare department official to fall since the Davey administration took office, Jan. 14, in addition, Miss Louise Stitt, Ohio State economics instructor, lost her post as head of the division of minimum wages in the department of industrial relations and Frank D. Henderson was discharged as state relief director. Miss Stitt said she was informed a "vote getter," was needed for the place.

William F. Amrine, superintendent of the London prison farm, resigned when Mrs. Alliman insisted he disclose his employees' political affiliations. Mrs. Alliman accepted his resignation only last week, by action of the governor.

Preston E. Thomas, for 23 years warden of the Ohio penitentiary, was suspended by Governor Davey.

Death Pact Letters Are Read In Court

JANE AND ELIZABETH DU BOIS

By GAYLE TALBOT, Associated Press Foreign Staff.
ROMFORD, Eng., Feb. 25.—After hearing read in open court two farewell notes which Jane and Elizabeth Du Bois wrote before plunging to their deaths last week from a Paris-bound airplane, a coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind, today.

The letters, in which the sisters poured out their grief for the death of two royal air force officers in whom they had a romantic interest, were read publicly over the protests of Franklin C. Gowen, United States consul, who argued the letters should be submitted to the jury privately.

EX-WIFE KILLS HER SUCCESSOR

Theater Lobby Is Scene of Fatal Shooting in Kentucky

(By Associated Press) SOMERSET, Ky., Feb. 25.—A flame of jealousy that burned for four years in the heart of an ex-wife had been extinguished today by gunfire.

Mrs. Eva Cooper Wilson, 38, of Somerset, sat grim and tight lipped in a Pulaski jail cell, a murder charge hanging over her head.

The woman who had taken her place as the wife of Truesdale Wilson, Monticello, Ky., Mrs. Marie Dutton Wilson, 35, lay dead, the victim of a theater lobby shooting here in which four bullets pierced her body.

The husband, in a statement to authorities, termed the killing the work of "an insane and disordered mind." His first wife made no comment.

Four yards behind Mrs. Marie Wilson, as she slumped mortally wounded to the theater lobby floor yesterday, stood the first Mrs. Wilson, a smoking pistol in her hand.

Calmly she handed the weapon to Patrolman Herbert Nurfett, who rushed to the lobby from the rear of the theater when he heard the shooting. Taken to a hospital by Chief of Police J. B. Jasper, the victim of the gunfire died 20 minutes later.

In shooting down her rival, Mrs. Wilson, Chief Jasper said, made good an attempt which, on May 13, 1931, failed only because a policeman interfered. On that day, he said, she trailed the woman from a church and fired at her three times, two of the bullets taking effect but not inflicting serious wounds.

EAGLES REVIEW THEIR WORK ON 32ND BIRTHDAY

Accomplishments of Order Outlined at Banquet Here

H. W. PEALY GIVES CHIEF ADDRESS

Dinner, Dance Features of Anniversary Observance

With more than 150 in attendance, despite extremely unfavorable weather conditions, the Salem series of Eagles celebrated the 32nd anniversary of its founding at a banquet Saturday night in the lodge home on East State st.

In a short program following the dinner, the aims of the lodge were outlined and the accomplishments of the organization since its founding were reviewed.

Show Steady Growth

The steady growth of the lodge over a period of 32 years was outlined by speakers, chief among whom were H. W. Pealy, secretary, who has been a guiding light in affairs of the organization for many years, and Alf K. L. Coughlin, the toastmaster.

The Salem lodge was founded just eight years after the organization of the grand lodge. It has shown a consistent growth. It has been active in local charitable movements and as a unit of the state organization has been active in the promotion of mother's day observance, old age pensions and workmen's compensation.

Secretary Pealy, who took office in 1923, and who has been returned to the post regularly in annual elections, declared that the aeris had not defaulted in any of its benefit payments during the entire period of the depression.

Sacks Unable to Attend

Pealy spoke in the absence of Charles Sacks of Akron, assistant county prosecutor, who, writing congratulations to the order, expressed regret that affairs of his office would not permit him to attend.

Brief talks were given by two charter members who attended, Frank Moff of Salem and Walter MackEdowney of Cleveland.

Dancing followed the program, with music provided by the Caulfield and Hundertmark orchestra.

15 AMENDMENTS BEFORE SOLONS

State Legislators Receive Proposed Constitutional Changes

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS, Feb. 25.—Fifteen proposals to amend the state constitution, seven dealing with taxation, have been submitted to the legislature.

Three seek further to reduce or limit the taxes on real estate, although the present 10-mills limitation was effective only Jan. 1. One would reduce the limitation to five mills, while another would abolish all real estate taxes except five mills for debt service. The third would require all classes of property to bear their proportional amount of levies for bond issues.

A return to the old uniform rule of taxation by repeal of the present provision for classification of property, is proposed by another amendment. Under such a plan, money, securities of all character, manufacturing and mercantile establishments would be taxed at the same rate as their true value in money. Under classification, each class bears a separate rate.

Exemptions Proposed

Three amendments would create additional exemptions from taxation. One would exempt the owner's home up to $3,000, and another up to $3,500, while the other would exempt all lands used for game propagation or refuge.

One proposal has appeared for a one-house or unicameral legislature. It would be composed of senators elected from congressional districts and between 80 and 85 representatives chosen from assembly districts. The governor, lieutenant governor and heads of executive departments would have seats in the assembly.

The governor, secretary of state and state auditor would constitute an apportionment board to select the state for congressmen, state senators, and representatives after each federal census. Their work could be overridden by a three-fifths vote of the assembly or by a referendum. Senators would be chosen for four-year terms and receive double the pay of representatives who would be elected for two year terms.

The senate would meet alone at least once a month to conduct investigations and to prepare bills for introduction in the assembly.

Ask Short Ballot

The short ballot which has been rejected on several occasions is proposed by another amendment, under which only the governor and lieutenant governor would be elected by popular vote. The state auditor would be elected by the general assembly. All other department heads would be appointed by the governor. Another proposal would allow party designations to

POLICE SEIZE BOOTLEG LIQUOR

Driver Abandons Machine With 145 Gallons in It After Accident

A total of approximately 145 gallons of whiskey was seized by state highway patrolman shortly after 1 p. m. today following an automobile accident on route 45 one mile below Salem.

Patrolman H. E. Kooniz, answering an accident call, discovered an abandoned car loaded with the whiskey which the officers labeled as "bootleg." The liquor was in five gallon cans.

The driver of the whiskey-loaded machine disappeared immediately after his machine was stopped when a tire "blew" after he had sideswiped the automobile of L. B. Harris, Salem attorney. Harris was thrown into a ditch, escaping injury, however.

The patrolman, who immediately started a check of the license number of the abandoned machine, HM-165, believed to be from Cleveland, reported that the driver of the car had thumbed a ride into Salem and disappeared.

MONARCHY OUT WARNS HITLER

Nazi Chieftain Cheered as He Delivers Commemoration Speech

(By Associated Press) MUNICH, Germany, Feb. 25.—Monarchism and Republicanism are dead in Germany, says Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The Fuehrer so told his old Nazi campaigners yesterday in an aggressive address commemorating the 15th anniversary of the party's foundation.

The speech, delivered in the huge Munich town hall, elicited uproarious cheers from his followers.

"I prophesy again," he shouted, "that none of the old systems will return."

"We had no confidence in the existing regime, but in the German people when we began our fight. Democracy promised to enable a majority of outstanding achievements, but jobbers and usurers destined German economy, charlatans and criminals German policy."

"We didn't believe in Germany as represented before the war, Hitler said, turning to the monarchial system.

SHIPS SWIRL IN ATLANTIC GALE

Eight Vessels in Distress Off French Coast; Twelve Die

(By Associated Press) Eight crippled vessels struggled to reach port today in the wake of howling gales which swept the North Atlantic and Bay of Biscay off the French coast.

Two persons lost their lives at sea. Ten were killed ashore in France as violent winds whistled from the ocean causing widespread damage. Many were injured and damage was estimated at several million francs.

The 2,901-ton Greek steamer Eufichia Vergottis appealed for assistance, saying her steering apparatus was disabled. Also in the bay of Biscay, the Italian steamer Caterina Madre, terrifically battered by mountainous seas as she wallowed helpless from loss of her propeller, broadcast an S O S.

"This afternoon will be too late," said the message.

The same vessel encountered difficulties last Friday and a tug was sent to its assistance.

Another Italian steamer, the Speitro reported she was in distress in the Mediterranean sea.

The Outing, a British vessel, was in trouble for the second time in three days. Her message to Lloyd's in London said she was in urgent need of aid from a ship to pump oil to the windward and quiet the seas crashing against her superstructure.

AUDITOR OF STATE COMES TO AID OF SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Snow of Last Year Deeper Than '35 Fall

The erstwhile beautiful mantle of snow of the last few days, which is just plain slush now, set a record only for the present year, contrary to the opinions of quite a few sidewalk shovelers whose creaking backs and groaning arms gave the impression this must have been the daddy of all snowfalls.

Lawrence Cappeland of Millport, weather observer, said today that his instruments had recorded an official snowfall of 5.3-10 inches. Earlier in the month there was recorded a fall of 5 inches.

A year ago exactly to the day, Feb. 25, and Feb. 26, eight inches of snow came tumbling down out of the skies. Cappeland's records reveal, and that, it will be remembered, was preparatory to several days of downright cold weather. Next Thursday a year ago the mercury skidded off to 13 degrees below zero and then, as if that wasn't enough, made 21 below on the following day.

Shoveling coal is just as bad as shoveling snow, and a lot more expensive, moans Mr. John Q. Citizen, as he keeps a weather eye peeled on storm signals for the coming Thursday and Friday.

Declaring many school districts were "broke," Tracy said the appropriation was requested by the state department of education.

The regular appropriation for schools is not distributed until March 30.

Describing the two million dollar allotment as an "emergency measure, based on the ratio of $2 per pupil," the auditor said the regular appropriation would be made later.

Joseph Fichter, assistant state director of education, praised the cooperation of Tracy, but said "it doesn't solve the weak school district problem."

Fichter has urged a reallocation of the sales tax revenue.

The emergency appropriation was the result of an agreement worked out by the state department of education, a sub-committee of the Ohio senate on schools and the auditor.

Average daily attendance in Ohio schools, Fichter disclosed, is 1,246,951.

List Appropriations

Among the appropriations were: Salem $5,323.02, East Liverpool $11,660, East Palestine $3,060, Wellsville $3,414, Lisbon, $2,156, Alliance $10,659.86, Canton, $4,478, Warren $17,866, Struthers $6,454.74, Girard $4,398, Hubbard $3,130, Toronto $3,250, Sigmerville, $12,579, Mingo $2,880, Youngstown $71,780, Campbell $8,782, Massillon $10,092, Akron $102,864 and Barborton $9,965.80.

The appropriation for Columbiana county was $37,624.80.

There was eight hundred thousand dollars bet at that track on the eight races. The stores of Los Angeles put on a dollar sale, and they played to more money than the races did, and Iowa had a picnic the same day out here and they had more people than the races and the dollar sign combined.

With all these going on in one town, I wouldn't worry too much about the country going

The senate's adoption of the prevailing wage amendment to the work relief bill has thrown the status of the whole $4,885,000,000 proposal in doubt. The bill may be discarded as a result.

The senate's decision was a defeat for President Roosevelt. It was a victory for the American Federation of Labor. What does it mean to the country? Is the general welfare at stake?

Organized labor argued that payment of less than prevailing wages would jeopardize wage scales in private employment. This argument places private employment and work relief on the same footing. It says that wages made possible by charity should be equal to regular wage rates.

They were not intended to be so in the original concept of the bill. Work relief was to be a substitute for the dole, paying slightly higher benefits than the dole but lower benefits than private employment afforded. This relationship was generally accepted.

Assume the government were to allocate $100,000 to a work relief project in this community. Assume that $75,000 would be spent for labor and $25,000 for material. At the probable work relief wage of $50 a month, 250 men could be given employment for six months. If, by using prevailing wage scales, the wage were to be increased to, say, $100 a month, only half as many men could be employed for six months. On the other hand, if 200 men were to be employed at prevailing wage rates amounting to an average of $100 a month, they would have to divide up the work. The result would be the same as if they had worked for relief wages, as far as pay was concerned. A dollar an hour doesn't mean any more than 50 cents an hour if a man isn't allowed to work long enough to earn dollar. How are regular wages affected by this ineffective safeguard?

The American Federation of Labor may be spending its energy winning a Pyrrhic victory in the prevailing wage battle. If it succeeds in getting the amendment through congress, its force may be destroyed by the method of administration. It may hurt itself more by winning its fight with the administration than it would by losing.

SIZZLING

From the size of the fire of protest which has been kindled it is a good guess the pink slip income tax shoopers will sizzle to a crisp before they can withdraw their long inquiring noses.

Inspired by Sen. LaFollette's ballyhoo, the senate last year decided to publish full returns on income taxes. Later, the bill was altered to call for data on gross income, total deductions from gross income, net income, total credits against it for normal tax purposes and the tax payable. Full returns would have been better, because partial information obviously causes partial understanding.

It isn't necessary to go into detail on how a stunt like this one, staged to frighten big, bad millionaires out of their wits, has no result except to make living more complicated for the Caspar Q. Milquetoasts of the world. The principal effect of the information given on the pink slip which is making income tax victims see red will be trouble—trouble from jealous acquaintances, from kidnapers, extortionists and gold brick salesmen.

A few congressmen are frantically trying to get the law repealed or at least suspended. If they don't succeed, Americans who honestly resent the inequitable intrusion on their privacy which the pink slip represents should follow the example of a lady in West Virginia, who wrote across her pink slip:

"I sign this under protest; it's an iniquitous thing and I believe it is against my constitutional rights that I should be forced by law (passed by a lot of morons and wild asses) to pay $5 to have my private affairs exposed to every blackmailer, rogue and malicious snooper in the country."

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, February 26

A difficult and uncertain day is forecast from the adverse lunar transits. There may be many elements of conflict, opposition and treachery to valiantly cope with, if success is to be wrested from difficult situations and conditions. This will be felt in employment, labor, transactions with mergers, rings or secret orders, as well as with strangers and in strange places. The best advice is to move cautiously, always alert to duplicity and along lines of least resistance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves immersed in a year of difficult situations with opposition, treachery and upheaval in either employment, labor, with possessions, or with strange interests and personalities. With all exercise discretion, caution and maintain poise and freedom from entanglement or forced activity where possible. "Make haste slowly" is good advice.

A child born on this day should have a thoroughly sound and practical education, with patience, courage instilled. A bright and optimistic philosophy of life should be emphasized, as it may be prone to be solemn and sedate.

Notable nativity: Victor Hugo, author.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 25—Diary: Up and got a fine wigging from my wife for leaving the lights burning all night. So to my mail and a post card from George Gershwin and the lady cashier at the Charleston, S. C., hotel where he is billeted. And messages from Karl Bickel, Guy Lombardo and Alberto Compione.

To breakfast with Harry Silvey but he so entranced by a blonde nymph, swathed in silver fox, he scarcely touched his food. Afterward by Bruce Barton's, he in a gay lather his daughter Betsy is home from the hospital and on the mend. And to see Clara Walsh's midget schnauzer at the Plaza.

Dinner at the Will Haynes and the Joseph P. Kennedy's there. Also Walter Rothacker and Betty and Bill Rogers and Bill gib about John Garner, whose horse sense he admires. Then to a theatre and met the president's daughter Anna and her new husband John Boettiger.

The most restless bundle of human energy in New York is the international lawyer Col. Joseph M. Hartfield. During business conferences or at social gatherings, he is constantly hopping out of his chair to pace back and forth. He thinks best on the move and often crosses the ocean just for the deck walking when unraveling a problem. Joseph Choate thought best in rapid strides. Van Gogh left his easel frequently to circle his studio. Theodore Roosevelt, when beset, liked to walk swiftly alone. Cleveland cleared his mind by strolling in the rain.

Key West, Fla. is in the experimental throes of trying to change a bankrupt industrial city, almost abandoned, into a tourist resort. An appeal is to be made especially to artists and writers, a number of whom are, wintering there. In the list are Ernest Hemingway, John Dos Passos and Robert Frost. James Joyce has been asking about the place, too.

Personal nomination for the most agreeable feminine operatic voice on the air—that of Gladys Swarthout.

A distinguished gentleman in San Francisco writes that on shipboard a few days out of Yokohama recently he, while browsing in the library, came upon a volume "Biography of an African Slave," written in the Italian in 1854 and subsequently translated into English. The gentleman had only finished reading "Anthony Adverse" and says to his surprise found another Anthony skipping gaily through Italy, Spain, Cuba and Africa. No matter where Anthony came from, his author, even if a revamping, did a grand job. And a lady from sedate Portland, Me. recently wrote: "To what was Anthony Adverse?"

They were talking of fancy names of editors. Such as the one in London named Clancy Herriot. Half my choice is Perriton Maxwell, of Cosmopolitan 20 years ago. He was also an editor of Judge at one time. Also the only editor I ever heard of who was also a skillful cartoonist. O. yes, Panghorn Zipp Ott is an Australian editor.

One of New York's flashiest spenders is the husky booming-voiced James Auditory, a stevedore contractor, a millionaire. At 50, he is able to watch several dawns in a row and be at his office by 9 and carries a dock-walker swing from the ankle in emergencies. He was a crony of Jimmy Walker's on loose evenings. Probably his greatest charm, however, is his consistent check snatching. There are not many around any more.

Bagatelles: Augustus John's Sealyham will bark at a loose oyster all day. Bob Davis has traveled 421,000 miles in the past five years. The Prince of Wales is a sucker for bright red pajamas. Gene Tunney has been offered top price for six articles on his round-the-world jaunt. The European press generally condemned the Hauptmann trial as a Roman Holiday. Charles Hanson Towne is out filling lecture engagements, too. Frank Fay, and it's about time, is scheduled for a big come-back in a film shortly. Walter Lippmann never replies to the jibes of critics.

George Jessel tells of the philandering Mr. Cohen kodaked on the beach with a scantily clad sweetie by a blackmailing photographer. A week later the photographer, in guise of an art salesman, appeared at Mr. Cohen's office, and after showing several canvases, plopped down an enlargement of the beach snapshot. Quick as that, the victim gulped: "I'll take 12 of those, if you please!"

Russia Marches on to New Goals

Josef Stalin

Military demonstration in Red Square at Moscow.

Soviet Russia is marching steadily forward under the guiding hand of Josef Stalin, dictator, toward two stupendous objectives. Reform of the Communist system to bring all the far-flung population into active participation in the government is one movement now under way. A powerful military machine which will guard the Soviet Union against invasion and police its huge empire is another immediate goal. An impressive display of Russia's new military strength was staged in the famous Red Square where thousands of Soviet troops and artillery divisions were reviewed by Stalin.

Removal of Scars By Surgery

IT IS disheartening to the victim of severe burn or accident to learn that he will be scarred for life. Permanent facial deformities and unsightly scars cause much unhappiness. Fortunately, because of the advances in plastic surgery, disfiguring scars are not as frequently seen as in former years.

This branch of medicine has been practiced for a good many years. But we owe most of our present knowledge of plastic surgery to the ingenuity of the military surgeons during the World War. These men were confronted with many plastic problems. It was their job to restore to as near a normal appearance as possible the parts impaired by hideous wounds and injuries.

Popularity Increasing
Within recent years plastic surgery has become increasingly popular. Victims of nasal defects, bony deformities and disfiguring scars have been relieved through this treatment.

Plastic operations, other than those indicated for the correction of damaged parts, are sometimes the cause of much criticism. If plastic surgery is necessary consult with your physician and follow his advice. He will refer you to a competent surgeon specializing in this work. It is unwise to accept recommendations from "beauty specialists" and laymen who are unfamiliar with the many difficulties of this line of work.

Bear in mind that no plastic surgery should be permitted unless it is performed by a capable surgeon who is recognized by a specialist in this field. He must be duly licensed and of good standing in the local medical society. Avoid charlatans and quacks who resort to circularization to attract unsuspecting patients. Plastic surgery requires special training and skill.

The operation must be performed under aseptic conditions and without jeopardy to the health of the patient. It consists of reconstructing the part of the body that has been altered by an injury or which is destroyed because of some congenital deformity.

The plastic surgeon prepares molds, and plans the reconstruction before he actually operates. I happen to know a plastic surgeon who uses a plaster model and patiently plans the necessary reconstruction step by step. The model is then used as a guide in the operation.

As I have implied, this comparatively new branch of surgery has answered a great demand for the correction of scars and disfigurements as well as nasal deformities. But I would like again to warn my readers against the many unlicensed, unethical individuals who pose as "plastic surgeons." If you are desirous of having a plastic operation consult with your family doctor. You may be assured of his interest in your welfare and that he will give you sound advice.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

CHAPTER XXXI Stubbornness

"You ready to go?" said Pearl Shene as Mark and Loring leaned at the bar.

"Just about," answered Mark. "Sort of late to leave today," rumbled the giant, "Taulanga's good distance."

"We'll take it by night," said Mark, wondering if Vanya would actually persist in her obstinacy. She wouldn't, he decided, she was bluffing beyond doubt. "It's cooler that way," he added, to Shene.

"Sometimes no," said the other. "Can't help it. We'll have to do it; the packet leaves Taulanga early tomorrow."

Shene gave only a hoarse rumbling by way of reply.

"And while I think of it," said Mark, "I want you to credit my friend Loring with a quart bottle. I'll pay for it now."

"Sure," said Shene. "He'll get it whenever he wants it."

"I think I will," said Loring, disregarding the glare of Shene's unfriendly eyes.

"Want a receipt?" asked Mark.

"What good is a receipt from him?" queried the beachcomber, utterly careless of the fact that Shene was glowering at him. "It would have about as much value as an indenture from Hong there, and that's worth, to be very exact, nothing!"

Shene gave a faint but ominous smile. He moved away down the path of the bar, and engaged Loring in a low-voiced discussion of some sort. Mark caught the murmured sound of a word or two, it sounded like "last chance."

"You're simply laying the foundation for future trouble," he muttered to Loring. "Why don't you try being a little tactful?"

"You can't use tact with pigs," said the beachcomber casually.

Mark set his glass on the bar.

"I've got a number of things to attend to," he said, moving away. "I'll see you before I leave."

He ascended the stairway. Vanya's door was closed, but he heard her moving about within the chamber; he knocked gently on the panel.

The door opened, and he stepped in. Vanya was wearing her flowered robe and tiny leather moccasins; she had apparently been combing her hair, for it cascaded in glistening ebony streams about her shoulders. She looked at Mark with that serious questioning glance he had come to know so well.

"Has the grand jury reported?" he asked, smiling at her.

"Yes, Mark," she said, still with the grave eyes fixed on him.

"And did it reverse the decision?" he continued, covering his growing concern by the use of banter.

"No. It confirmed it."

"Honey!" Mark exclaimed. "You can't be meaning to carry this farce any further!"

"It isn't a farce, Mark. It's a comedy or a tragedy—but not a farce!" She sank on the bed.

"Which one it is depends on where you sit, I suppose."

"I know which it is to me!"

"And to me," added the girl. "But your friend Loring would laugh his shriveled soul away at it!"

"Vanya, you're being a stubborn fool!"

"I don't know, Mark. Perhaps I am."

"The prau's here. We ought to be leaving right now."

"And yet we're not leaving. Not now nor ever, Mark."

Mark paced back and forth in the limited space of the room. He was brought finally face to face with Vanya's decision, and he realized at last how desperately he wanted her to go with him. Yet it seemed incredible that she should refuse, should prefer this sordid sailor's hangout to the possibilities, the opportunities, that America could offer. He turned suddenly to her, resolved on a new method of attacking her opposition. He seated himself beside her, taking one tiny hand in his. He lifted it in his own great palm, and held it close as if studying it.

"Vanya, dear," he said. "Have you changed so much in your feeling toward me? Have I done or said anything so unforgivable that my offer, which once was acceptable to you, has suddenly become so distasteful that you can't even consider it?"

"The girl looked at him with something of the old sullen look returning to her face. A certain sweetness that had grown there of late was dying. She made no answer."

"Dear," said Mark softly, "won't you answer me? At least I deserve to hear your reasons for this abrupt reversal."

"I've given you my reason," said Vanya dully. "Don't make me repeat it. You can't give it, and I can't demean myself to ask."

"Vanya, dear," he murmured, "did you mean what you said that day, the day we walked together?"

"That I loved you? Mark, you know I meant it. I say it again, Mark—I love you! Of that at least I'm not ashamed."

"Yet you won't go?"

"And yet I won't go, dear."

Mark sat silently thoughtful for a long moment. Vanya reached out her free hand, touching very lightly the unruly brown curls of his head.

"Vanya," he said finally, "if I thought that your fear of me were moving you, if I believed that a repugnance to my caresses were troubling you, I'd promise gladly to bring you into America without a single advance on my part. I'd take you there without obligation, and ask absolutely nothing of you."

"Mark! Oh, Mark!" she cried. "I know that I never doubted that. If I'd wanted that, I'd have asked. But it doesn't solve the difficulty—not in the least. I couldn't accept charity—from you, least of all people in the world."

"Marriage again!" thought Mark ruefully. "The one thing I'm for-bidden to give by everything in which I believe." But aloud he said, "I knew you'd refuse. Yet the offer stands."

"But it doesn't solve anything, dear."

"No," said Mark slowly. "It does not."

He pressed the girl closer to him, taking her lovely, troubled face between his hands. He leaned down and kissed her, gently at first, and then with increasing ardor as she closed her dark eyes and yielded in his arms. When finally he withdrew his lips, she lay quiescent against him for awhile, her breath sounding in little gasps.

"Vanya," he breathed, "will you go to America with me?"

"Mark, dear!" she whispered. "Will you go?"

She sat suddenly erect, leaning away from him.

"Mark! Even your kisses are lies, planned for effect. But they can't make me alter this decision. No matter how quickly I forget while I'm in your arms, I'll always remember the moment I'm free of you. I'll remember and repeat what I've said—Mark, I can't go!"

Mark was nearing the point of exasperation. His quick temper rose in him, he fought it back with a surge of effort.

"Vanya," he said, "if this is a trick of yours, an attempt to force my hand, or a method of getting a better bargain, don't drive me too far to recall."

"A trick?" queried the girl. "Do you think I don't mean it?"

"I don't know, but if you don't mean it, you'd better retract it now."

"Well, I don't retract it. You'll see whether I mean it!"

"Vanya," said Mark. "I'm going to my room before this—this insane defiance of yours drives my anger beyond control. I'm going to pack what's left of my things, and then I'm coming back here. And I want to see your belongings packed too."

He turned abruptly and strode out of the door. A flicker of movement at the head of the stairs caught his attention, and he saw the massive face of Hong disappearing below the floor level.

"Eavesdropping," he thought fiercely. "To the devil with him!"

He strode angrily back to his own room and thrust the door savagely open, kicking his littered bags aside.

He sat angrily on the bed, wondering what was to be done now. What if Vanya remained firm in her decision? After all this long search, all his restlessness, his dreams of her.

"I'll have to out-bluff her now," he thought. "Is this Taitot stubbornness or really the ideals and moralities of my people? Damned if I know!"

He rose, and began flinging his possessions into his bags. The room looked odd and bare when he finished; it had been home for so long. Then he strode to Vanya's room, knocked and entered, to find her still seated on the bed as if she hadn't moved.

"You're not packed!" he snapped. "Does this mean you're persisting in your obstinacy?"

She nodded gravely, silently.

"Very well! I'm leaving, he paused for her reply, none came. "Listen, Vanya," he continued. "I give you one final chance. I'll wait just a half-hour on the beach. Understand? Half an hour!"

He turned away, moving toward the door.

"Mark," said Vanya. "Mark, your key. Take it."

The key of the white house in Spring Brook.

"Keep the damned thing!" grated Mark.

"No." She sprang to the door, tore the key from the ancient lock and thrust it into Mark's hand. He saw tears on her cheeks. "I don't want a key! I'll not need a key to

Carried Out at
G. A. R. Hall

The George Washington celebration held at the G. A. R. hall Friday evening was attended by 70 members of the four allied organizations, Sons of Union Veterans, Daughters of Union Veterans, Sons of Union Veterans auxiliary and Women's Relief corps.

A dinner at 6:30 began the festivities, following which a most enjoyable musical program was presented.

The program opened with the group singing "America." A mixed quartet, composed of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Snyder, Harold Babb and Miss Anna Lottman sang several selections. Mrs. John Hundertmark and Mrs. Harold Babb accompanied at the piano. Mrs. A. T. Hutson gave a reading, which was followed by a piano duet by Mrs. Babb and Miss Anna Cook. Misses Kathryn Taylor and Lela Naragon entertained with a trumpet duet.

Members of the Baptist church presented a play, "The Blue Bonnet." The cast was composed of Mrs. L. H. Taylor, Mrs. R. B. Snyder and Miss Lillian Mundy. The Hundertmark ensemble, consisting of John L. Hundertmark, director, Elizabeth Snyder, Christian Robinson and Joseph Pales, entertained next with several numbers. Following the ensemble John Hundertmark played a violin solo. Harold Babb sang a selection, followed by a piano solo by Mrs. Babb of a medley of American airs. George Mounts, chairman of arrangements for the program, made a few remarks concerning the purposes of the celebration. The program was held in observance of the birthday of Washington and to celebrate the redecoration of the hall. This occasion was the first time the four allied organizations had joined in one meeting and it was proposed that the event be made an annual affair.

Built-In Conveniences Give Modern Touch To Home

How an old fireplace was transformed into a charming Colonial mantel with built-in shelves and cupboards on either side is shown in these illustrations. Many home owners can thank the National Housing Act for making such improvements possible.

Houses today, done in the most modern manner, may have as many built-in features as a ship's cabin, practical and convenient for everyday use. New ideas in interior design contemplate more and more built-in furnishings in the home. Grandmother had a pantry and a cupboard, and that was all. She didn't think of built-in beds, built-in electric stoves and any of the one hundred and one built-in fittings that the modern woman may enjoy and which at the same time conserve time, space, and money.

Under provisions of the National Housing Act, the first section of which is now functioning under the direction of the Federal Housing Administration, money is available through local financial institutions approved by the government, to the home owner for modernization of the interior of the house as well as the exterior.

All built-in furniture is considered immovable under terms of the National Housing Act and loans up to $2,000 can be made for the sole purpose of constructing built-in household equipment, if such is desirable.

In the ultra modern houses most of the furniture is built-in. In the most extremely modern house ever designed every article of furniture is built-in—even pneumatic beds. While this is impractical at the present time for the average home, it seems to be the goal to which built-in interiors are rapidly tending.

Concert Given At Baptist Church

Two of the numbers presented at the sacred music concert given by outstanding Salem soloists last evening at the First Baptist church were selections never presented in Salem before, having been heard only over the radio. These selections were "Lord, We Pray in Mercy Lead Us," a special arrangement set to music from the tone poem "Finlandia," and "Inflammatus," from "Stabat Mater" by Rosini. The solo role in the latter was taken by Mrs. Esther Odoran.

The concert was very well attended. It was one of a number of these concerts usually presented each year. A. T. Hutson was choir director and Miss Junnie Jones organist. Salem musicians featured in the event were Miss Marie Callahan, contralto; Fred Hutson, baritone; the Hundertmark Ensemble, Miss Junnie Jones, Mrs. Esther Odoran, and members of the choir and the orchestra of the Baptist church.

Bargains are plentiful. The ads. will tell you where.

Today's Pattern

Here's success to the junior girl! This little dress with its nicely cut sleeves (which extend to make a yoke in back) and front panel is bound to be attractive. With the new neckline—a tie which appears from beneath the sleeves—it becomes an individual and colorful affair. The bow effect should complement or solid color fabric—either cotton, rayon or silk. As a variation, buttons may outline the diagonal of the sleeves (see small sketch) and the scarf may be omitted. It's so simple the youngster, herself, could make it quickly.

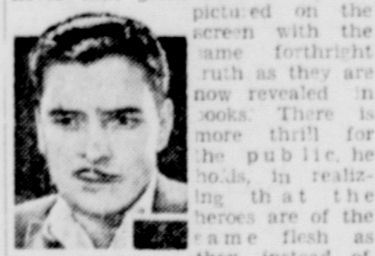

Address orders to Salem News Pattern Department, 243 West 17th St., New York City.

Ronald Colman, Loretta Young Star In "Clive Of India," Now At State

NOW showing at the State theater is Darryl F. Zanuck's production, "Clive Of India," with Ronald Colman and Loretta Young. Here we have a scenario prepared by W. P. Lipscomb and R. J. Minney, the British authors of the original London play, and given Hollywood treatment. The difference is truly remarkable for "Clive Of India" is charged with tremendous action and the dialogue suitable for both English and American audiences.

Colman Is Superb

For the role of Robert Clive, Ronald Colman was forced to shave his mustache out robbing Mr. Colman of this feature seems only to have increased his acting powers. His portrayal of Clive is excellent, intensely moving and certainly one of the best things in his career. Though there is absolutely no similarity in plots, one is reminded of Colman's "Beau Geste" as he plays the part of Clive—both roles were those of soldiers and in both Colman was at his best. The star believes that great men should be depicted on the screen with the same forthright ruth as they are now revealed in books. There is more thrill for the public, he feels, in realizing that the heroes are of the same flesh as they, instead of, as in the past, made to seem something more than mere humans. He follows out his conviction in his portrayal of the British hero.

The film shows that while Clive was the man who brought the Empire of India under the British flag, he was broken and humbled by his countrymen while still a young man. The production shows his weaknesses as well as his attributes as, for instance, his duplicity in forging the signature of the British admiral in an effort to set rid of the tyrant who was then ruling India. The important thing was to show Clive as a human being with the idea that the public is willing to make its own allowances for the frailties of its heroes.

Loretta Young Is 'Meg'

Loretta Young seems inspired when she works with Colman. In "Clive Of India" she plays the role of Margaret, wife of Clive, she gives a splendid performance, touching and sincere. Francis Lister, English star, is good as Edmund, Clive's best friend, and others in the cast are C. Aubrey Smith, Montague Love, Colin Clive, George R. Brown, and Leo Carroll.

Loretta Young is "Meg" in "Clive Of India." She is one of the most "marvelous" of the costume epics to date, come with gratifying respect for the British Empire. It traces the life of the over ambitious Robert Clive from the time he was an obscure clerk in the East India company, believing himself to be a man of destiny, to the time he becomes Lord Clive of Plassey and captain of the Army. Through his success and on to his failure, the picture carries the story, his love and marriage to Margaret and his faith in all her ideas; his great battles and the way he wins them; his corruption of his reputation Fifty seven sets were required while the battle scenes were filmed. The Battle of Plassey is one of the high lights of the film, wherein a large number of elephants and extras were employed.

BROWN'S

I intend to have a LOVELY HOME!

By MARGARET IVES

Written Especially for The Salem News.

For years I have wanted a lovely home. Not a home beyond our means. Not necessarily a home of dreams. We have a house. It is almost free of all encumbrances now. But it lacks the kind of floors that I would like to have in it. The heating plant is about done for—antiquated, inefficient, inadequate. The trim, the woodwork and the walls are not modern by any means. The lighting fixtures are about the date of 1910. My house lacks practically all the things that make a house a lovely home. And what it lacks not only fills us with desire, but it takes from the sales value of our property. Today we could not get nearly what we paid for our house if we had to sell it.

We have enjoyed a fair income; fair enough for us to buy a home, almost pay for it in full. But we have never accumulated the needed amount of money to do the repair and remodeling job at any one particular time.

But today we can do it—and we intend to do it. Under the terms made possible by the Federal Housing Administration, we can borrow the money to make our house a HOME. We can now borrow the money from any approved institution for repairs and remodeling to be done to our house.

We intend to take from three to five years to repay the money needed to pay for our remodeling job. We are a good risk for the bank. We have our feet on the ground. We are not doing more than we should do, nor do we have ideas of developing a home beyond our means. We are a typical American family, doing a job for ourselves and at the same time doing our bit to help put all of America squarely on its own feet.

like this!*

Quakers Give Fine Display And Easily Defeat Niles, 34 to 10

Salem Tossers Befuddle Visitors With Early Barrage of Shots to Lead 19-4 at Half; Zelle and Cope Lead Attack; Struthers Here Friday

By RAY L. DEAN, News Sports Editor

Your Salem High school tossers gave a remarkable performance of their basketball ability here Saturday night as they swished balls right and left into corded nets to wallop a Niles McKinley quintet, 34 to 10.

The victory was the 15th out of 17 seasonal encounters and the tenth straight since being upset by Alliance, a defeat since atoned for. The Quakers close their schedule this Friday when they entertain the Struthers five in another home tilt.

The fans, who taxed the capacity of the Salem High gymnasium, realized shortly after the tussle began that the only question about the outcome was merely how many points the Brownmen would score.

Successive shots by Zelle, Palmer and Mullins started things rolling for Salem immediately when the game opened. Although Niles placed four points in the first quarter Salem held the visitors scoreless in the second period and at intermission the Quakers held a 19-4 lead.

Returning with equal power the Quakers dribbled and tossed through the Niles zone defense. When the third quarter playing time had elapsed the scoreboard blazed forth: Salem 29, Niles 5. Coach Brown's lads had again hit the net hard and this time for 10 points. Niles recorded only one on a charity toss by Titus, forward.

Earl Zelle and Ben Cope (each scoring 10 points) led the Quakers to the tune of "It floats through the air, etc." Zelle, a clever player if anyone should ask you, zipped through five field goals. Cope found the hoop four times and twice again when fouled.

Coach Brown then sent in substitutions and Shears took Zelle's post. McCloskey for Cope, Pukalski for Beck and later, Williamson for Pukalski.

Niles tried a feeble rally at this time, Dean Rees making two baskets in succession and then a free toss. There the rally faltered for other Niles players just couldn't get past the Salemites. With four minutes left, McCloskey made two points on fouls and Shears dribbled into the clear to sink the final marker.

McCarthy Finds Himself On Spot

Babe Ruth's Ambitions Embarrassing to Yank Manager

BY ALAN GOULD, Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The trouble with trying to solve the celebrated case of Babe Ruth's future in baseball is that it's more embarrassing than it's mysterious to the principal parties concerned.

Purdue may damage its title chances further when it meets Indiana at Bloomington tonight. In their previous tussle the Boilermakers, 44 to 38.

Whether the one-time home run monarch signs with the Yankees for 1935, as a player or merely as an ornament, there scarcely can be any real show-down before the closing of the coming American league season.

The Babe's fondest ambition is that he can stay in New York and eventually manage the Yankees. Since he hardly can be given any assurance on that score for the time being, he would jump at a chance to pilot any other big league club.

Meanwhile the man "on the spot" will be Joseph Vincent McCarthy, the Buffalo Irishman, whose $35,000-a-year contract as manager of the Yankees runs out this year.

"Marse Joe" took charge of the club in 1931, after a bust-up with the Wrigleys in Chicago.

He piloted the Yankees to an American league pennant in 1932 and beat the Cubs four straight in the World Series. Since then the club has run second to Washington and Detroit.

If the Yankees fail to win the pennant this year, McCarthy is bound to be under heavy fire and Ruth may replace him. If they finish on top, the Babe can start shopping around again.

Since his surprise triumph of Yarnoz, the Syracuse preliminary fighter has fallen before the veteran Vince Dundee, whom Yarnoz beat on three occasions. Unlike the return match appears to be, Yarnoz still feels the sting of his defeat and the rebuke of his "injury suit" drew from Chairman Harry Farrell of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission at the time of the Scranton bout.

At that time Lovellville drubbed Berlin Center, 37 to 10, and Canfield trounced Beloit, 36 to 11. Petersburg and Pitch battled away to a 28-28 tie but in an overtime Pitch took the game when it added two more points. Damascus Goshen bowed to Greenford in the other tilt of the evening, 29-16.

Poland and North Lima are to meet for a consolation game at 7:30 Tuesday. At 8:30 the same night Beloit will face Berlin Center and at 9:30, Goshen will play Petersburg.

In the finals Friday and Saturday Lovellville and Canfield will trade baskets with Pitch.

Chicago Cubs Off For California

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Vice president Charlie Grimm of the Cubs will lead 14 of his athletes out of Chicago tonight for Santa Catalina, Calif., where Manager Charlie Grimm will start drills in preparation for the National league season.

The first drill is scheduled for Thursday.

The White Sox, with all hands except Henry (Zeke) Bonura, slug-ging first baseman who is holding out at his home in New Orleans, will get away toward their Pasadena, Calif., training grounds tomorrow night.

Manager "Memphis Bill" Terry called his charges together for the first practice on Flamingo park diamond. Terry said all the Giant pitchers and catchers were on hand.

Ekky finished seventh.
